The three
concepts
mentioned in the
title of this volume
imply the contact
between two or
more literary
phenomena; they are based on similarities that are related to a form of 'travelling' and imitation or adaptation of entire texts, genres, forms or contents. Transfer comprises all sorts of 'travelling', with translation as a major instrument of transferring

literature across

Transfer aims at

Reception lays its
focus on the
receiving culture,
especially on
criticism, reading,
and interpretation.
Translation,

therefore, forms a major factor in reception with the general aim of reception studies being to reveal the wide spectrum of interpretations each text offers. Moreover, translations are the prime

The proposition that there is a correlation between language and culture or culture-specific ways of thinking can be traced back to the views of Herder and von Humboldt in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. It is generally accepted today that a language, especially its lexicon, influences its

speakers' cultural
patterns of thought
and perception in
various ways, for
example through a
culture-specific segmentation of the
extralinguistic reality,
the frequency of
occurrence of
particular lexical

items, or the
existence of keywords
or key word
combinations
revealing core
cultural values. The aim of this volume is
to explore the cultural dimension of a wide range of

semi-preconstructed

word combinations in English. The 17 papers of the volume are divided into four sections, focusing on particular lexemes (e.g. enjoy and its collocates), types of word combinations (e.g. proverbs and similes), use-related varieties (such as the

or answering-

and user-related
varieties (such as

sections are preceded
by a prologue, tracing
the development of
the study of formulaic
language, and

followed by an epilogue, which draws together the threads laid out in the various papers. The relation between language and culture in general has been explored in a number of important works over the past ten years. However, the study of the relation between English

phraseology and
culture in particular
has been largely neglected. This volume is the first
book-length
publication devoted
entirely to this topic.
The aim of this
volume is to

investigate the topic of Substance and Attribute. The way
leading to this aim is a dialogue between
Islamic and Western Philosophy. Our
project is motivated
by the observation
that the historical roots of Islamic and
of Western

Philosophy are very similar. Thus some of the articles in this volume are dedicated to the history of philosophy, in Islamic thinking as well as in Western traditions. But the dialogue between Islamic and Western Philosophy is not only an historical issue, it also has systematic relevance for actual philosophical questions. The topic Substance and Attribute particularly has an important history in both traditions; and it has systematic relevance ontological debate.

Physiognomy and
ekphrasis are two
of the most
important modes
of description in
antiquity and
represent the
necessary
precursors of
scientific description. The primary way of divining the characteristics and fate of an individual, whether inborn or acquired, was to observe the patient's external characteristics and behaviour. This volume focuses initially
